

Usability Test Overview

5/4/14

The user knew immediately what the site was for just due to the name.

The user did not have any trouble creating an account which automatically logged him in.

Creating a schedule did not provide this user any problems.

When creating an event the user did not realize that the start and end time could also be written in 12 hour time and would be converted automatically. The rest of the process did not cause this user any problems.

When adding a friend the user knew immediately to go to the friend page and had no issues adding that friend. When receiving a friend request, the user was aware as soon as he loaded a new page due to the prominent icon displayed in the navigation and knew exactly what the number meant.

The user brought up one final suggestion which was to possibly add more colors. This is highly subjective, so having themes to choose from is one solution that some sites opt for.